Winter Storm Moves into the Inland Empire

SAN BERNARDINO – A storm will move across Southern California beginning at three a.m. Friday morning, May 9, and into Friday night, according to the National Weather Service (NWS). Snowfall is expected to reach roadways at or above the 5,000 foot level which may affect mountain roads in San Bernardino and Riverside Counties.

Motorists should prepare for longer commute times if traveling to the local mountains and points north on Friday. Pack a Winter Care Kit and put it in your vehicle.

Caltrans maintenance crews are prepared and are working around the clock to keep local highways and interstates open. Follow the directions of the California Highway Patrol and maintain a safe distance behind Caltrans equipment, a minimum of 200 feet.
